Art and Industry – Wolfgang Sievers and Ford
Wolfgang Sievers (1913-2007) is one of Australia’s pre-eminent photographers, recognised for his deep understanding of the relationship between arts and industry.

In the 1950s through to the 1970s, Sievers photographed production at Ford Motor Company, both at the Geelong and Broadmeadows plants.

His powerful images depict the people and environment of the heavy industrial production line, offering a rare and valuable portrait of the predominantly migrant workforce at the time.

This exhibition acknowledges the remarkable achievement of this artist, as well as the presence of Ford Motor Company in Hume over the past five decades and its integral role in the development of our local community.

Our Voice, Our Impact – An exhibition of youth arts in Hume, celebrating National Youth Week

Our Voice, Our Impact is the official theme for National Youth Week 2014.

The Youth Services team at Hume City Council will showcase the outcomes of several youth projects in a multi-disciplinary exhibition encompassing visual art, short films and creative writing.

The work will reflect diverse stories by local young people.

Young people interested in being involved in the creation of this exhibition can contact Youth Services on 9205 2556.

Stations – A development project by Katie Lee and Jason Maling

Melbourne based artists Katie Lee and Jason Maling are designing a series of interactive public art works intended for parkland areas around Hume.

The exhibition is part of a development that explores how public playgrounds, exercise stations and artworks might intersect, to make usable ‘hybrid’ structures.

The exhibition will display working drawings, interactive objects and historical research as well as offer a series of workshops encouraging local community members to playfully test, comment and contribute to these ideas.

The results of this development will directly inform the final design process, with this innovative new work due to be completed in 2015.
